Likewise, the EPPB shall be responsible in providing energy stakeholders from the public and private sector with relevant information regarding the PEP, as well as key energy statistics and other energy-related indicators pursuant to the established Citizen’s Charter. In view of this, reliable and timely monitoring of energy data and statistics become indispensable as bases for policy formulation and decision-making. However, such monitoring is only possible if high-quality energy statistics are systematically gathered and effectively disseminated. Thus, the Energy Balance Table Management System (EBTMS) is included in the Department of Energy-Information Systems Strategic Plan (DOE-ISSP) CY2024-2025 with a two (2) – year implementation comprising a pre-development phase (year 1) and a development phase (year 2).	Bidder’s Compliance
---	--------------------------------

2. OBJECTIVES

The EBTMS which includes indigenous energy supply and production, importation and exportation, consumption, and inventory, including fuel input and feedstocks (in physical units) of energy resources, is designed with the following key objectives:

1. Central Data Repository: EBTMS will serve as a central data repository and warehouse of energy supply and demand data which allows online collection and submission from data providers, producers and energy stakeholders, automated unit conversions, processing, and validations.
2. Data Analytics: Leveraging data from various internal and external providers, the system will be able to support descriptive analyses. EBTMS shall generate Energy Commodity Account (ECA), Energy Balance Table (EBT), and produce useful energy statistical data and reports. Also, capable of using Artificial Intelligence (AI) to describe and analyze data.
3. Data Sharing and Processing: EBTMS can access various databases from other bureaus of the Department of Energy, as well as the ability to store both raw and processed data. Processed data generated by other bureaus of the Department will be automatically linked to the EBTMS using Application Programming Interface (API), Comma-separated values (CSV), and Data Capture Forms. The raw data are automatically converted to a standardized unit in thousand tons of oil equivalent (kTOE) which is used to account for all the energy data sources collected/submitted in various original raw units such as in metric tons, thousand barrels, gigawatt hours, among others.
4. User Management and Security: EBTMS provides processed energy data to authorized DOE, stakeholders, researchers, academes, and the general public through role-based access control (RBAC) or role-based security, allowing them to access energy-related information faster, easier and in a more convenient manner.
5. User-friendly Data Visualization Tools: The platform will feature user-friendly tools for visualizing EBT data enhancing accessibility and interpretation.
6. Other Features and Functionalities: Other system features and functionalities will be determined during the conduct of workshops and meetings.

In view hereof, we are looking for a Service Provider (SP) who can analyze and design the above Information System (IS) requirement.
